der of North Carolina, and every friend of the British government was stimulated into life and became a source of uneasiness and trouble to the back settlements. At this time General Rutherford, of North Carolina, made a requisition upon Sullivan and Washington counties in North Carolina for the aid of their militia in the defence of the State. Cornwallis was meeting with but little obstruction in his march and contemplated nothing less than the overrunning of North Carolina and the invasion of Virginia. It was this state of affairs that produced the alarm among the settlers in Washington county.

At the April court, 1780, William Campbell was recommended by the court and commissioned by the Governor, as colonel of the county militia, in the place of Evan Shelby, who had become a citizen of the State of North Carolina. Daniel Smith was commissioned lieutenant-colonel, and William Edmiston major. At the same time the following militia officers were recommended and commissioned:

Captains of Militia:

James Crabtree,	William Edmiston, Jr.,
William Edmiston,	Alexander Barnett,
David Beatie, Jr.,	David Beatie,
Charles Cocke,

and previously to this time and during the years 1778 and 1779, the following captains of militia were commissioned:

George Maxwell,	William Neil,
Thomas Caldwell,	James Fulkerson,

Lieutenants of Militia:

Robert Edmiston, Jr.,	Humberson Lyon,
William Bartlett,	William Davison,
William Edmiston,	Joshua Buckner,

Robert* received a pension from North Carolina, 1833. See North Carolina Booklet, G. A. R. for further information.

Beverly. John was a captain under Colonel Cleveland. According to Draper a pilfering soldier was taken to Cleveland by William Lenoir, and ordered to have his thumbs fastened in the notch of a tree while fifteen lashes were applied. This was called "thumbing the notch." Beverly, ordered to carry out the sentence, gave the fifteen lashes, and then kept on striking the wincing culprit without mercy. Colonel Herndon drew his sword, not being able to endure this cruelty, and tapped Beverly. The latter drew his own sword, and the resulting tilt might have had a fatal result but for the interference of mutual friends.

Bickley. Summers relates that in 1776 Charles Bickley helped build a mill for Henry Hamblin, one of the first settlers in Washington county. During the next four years Bickley was in many battles with the Tories and Indians, and afterwards in Lee county, where he located his military land grant. Descendants still live on the homestead. Others are G. B. and W. E. Bickley of the Bickley Clothing Company of Knoxville, Tennessee.

Bicknell. James, John, and Thomas were at King's Mountain. The last was a Wilkes county man under Cleveland. He was killed early in the battle.

Bishop. Levi, an ensign, is listed by Summers.

Black. Joseph served under Campbell. The city of Abingdon is on the site of Black Station. After the Revolution he located another Black Station in Blount county.

Blackburn. William, killed at King's Mountain, was a lieutenant under Campbell.

Arthur was also in the battle of Point Pleasant.

Ramsay says that in 1789, while John Blackburn was standing by a creek near Buchanan's Station in Davidson county, he was killed by Indians, scalped, and a spear left sticking in his body.

William and George* were directed by the court of Fincastle county, 1773, to clear a road from Samuel Briggs on Eighteen Mile Creek to James Bryan's on Eleven Mile Creek. In 1777 William was appointed a lieutenant for the militia of Washington county, Vir-
